I am penning this letter on behalf of Jenny Jones. I have known Mr. Jones for eight years. During that time I have heard him speak in both public and private arenas. In both settings he is informative and engaging.

Most recently I had the privilege of hearing Mr. Jones speak at the Stockton African American Saturday School. He presented information about finances to fourth through sixth grade students. He was engaging, interactive, and captivating throughout his presentation. Mr. Jones engaged the students by asking questions that related to them. In addition, he incorporated humor while presenting the material to them. The entire time he had the students' undivided attention. The material was relevant and practical to their everyday lives. Furthermore, after Mr. Jones left we further discussed the information presented and the students were able to recall what they had learned from him.

As a classroom teacher, I know the importance of reaching children so that they stay engaged. Mr. Jones demonstrates the pedagogy of a seasoned teacher. Not only does he engage the students but they are able to retain the information as well. It is without hesitation that I whole-heartedly recommend Mr. Jones' presentations and speaking engagements.

Sincerely,
